I feel that the U.S. Government is unfair In this case. The whole thing should be dropped if Netscape wants to compete let them build a better mouse trap.I think what Microsoft charges for its software is fair. Does the C.E.O. of Netscape & A.O.L. give as much money to schools and etc as Microsoft I dont think so. The stockholders and the consumers are the losers and have been severely damaged by this law suite.I think that Netscape & A.O.L. are just jealous. The Government lawyers are just trying to make a name for themselves. Anybody that thinks the breakup of A.T.&T. Has benefited any one is a Fruit Cake, my phone bill tripled, the service is poor at best and the Co. is in shambles. The DoJ attorney Joel Kline stated on T.V. that the breakup of A.T.&T. brought us the Touch Tone Phone he does not know what he is talking about either, we had the Touch Tone Phones before 1972 and at least a type of mechanical version of Touch Tone was installed prior to 1950 only used by long distance Operators. The DoJ should accept Microsoft's good faith settlement and the government could get on with better and more important things.
